THINKING OUT LOUD

By H. M. L., SR.

The human equation is never completely solved. Witness the trials of the Hardys. One jury convicts Lois Hardy of first degree murder—with no recommendation for mercy, which means the death penalty. The second jury finds her husband guilty, and recommends life imprisonment. The court has no recourse under the law, but to sentence the two according to the respective verdicts.

Both were convicted on confessions, not evidence of a direct nature. Lois Hardy was convicted largely on the testimony of Mrs. Gladys Dolley of Truckee, acting briefly as a jail matron, to whom Lois poured out the story of killing James W. McLain, a verbal confession. Joseph Hardy was convicted by his two signed confessions, one made in the Las Vegas jail, and the other in the Nevada County jail.

To a disinterested spectator, the written confessions were more damning than the oral confession, because they went into details of the conspiracy to kill McLain. Implied in the written confessions was a resolve on the part of the couple to kill someone with a car and money. It happened to be McLain, who was painted in the confessions as a lecherous brute. Whether he was or not, no one will ever know, but since the written confessions were considered true by the jury so far as the murder is concerned, it may be possible there was some provocation in McLain's conduct toward Lois Hardy. It is possible that the jury trying Joseph Hardy, took this consideration into account in its verdict.

Lois Hardy's story, told by Mrs. Dolley, gave no hint of a conspiracy between herself and Joseph, that the couple were resolved to kill and rob some traveler of car and other possessions. But the confession made in Las Vegas clearly states this resolve, made just as the couple were leaving Salt Lake City, on a hitch-hike back to Reno.

The attorney who defended Joseph Hardy caused to be stricken from record all evidence concerning the pistol, clip and cartridge shells. They had not been connected with the murder or with Hardy. The confessions were studied and instead of trying to prove Hardy guilty of something less than first degree murder, he centered his endeavors on saving his life by conditioning the minds of the jurors while they were being selected.

Following the killing of McLain, according to one of the written confessions the pair went to a bar and had several drinks. But the testimony of Strickland, innkeeper at Hirschdale where the crime was committed, was that Hardy alone visited him, and bought one Scotch whiskey. Where was Lois? And there are other discrepancies.

For instance the confessions state that Hardy hesitated to shoot McLain, but that Lois told him she would, if he didn't. This conversation is supposed to have taken place while the intended victim was fondling Lois. There was no evidence introduced to indicate that McLain was stone deaf and could not hear the conversation between the two. In fact the entire story pertaining to the scene and action of the killing sounds extremely fishy. The confessions state that Hardy, refused to go for drinks, as requested by McLain, and hung around, while the latter tried to seduce his sweetheart.

Yet there is no doubt that the Hardys did kill McLain. He was the one who gave directions over the telephone to the sheriff's office in Reno, for finding the body, which was found, and just as he described it. Whether Lois was actually on the scene or not, is another question. Hardy may have ordered McLain at gun-point to drive from the motor court in Sparks, Nevada, ordered him out at the end of the lonely road, marched him fifty feet into the brush, after the car stopped, and shot him in back of he head. It might have been his deed alone.

Yet Lois Hardy is sentenced to death and Joseph Hardy today will be sentenced to life imprisonment.

STEVENS WINS $100 AWARD WITH LOCAL INDUSTRY ESSAY

NEVADA CITY: Below is printed Elmer Stevens' prize-winning essay on Local Industry, which brought Stevens the $100 award in the contest put on by U. S. N. Johnson, proprietor of the Bret Harte Dairy.

Stanley Hoyer Halls, Ray J. Spicklemier, and Harry F. Sofge were judges in the contest.

The award was made Thursday. Many excellent entries were received so that the judges had a difficult time ascertaining which was the best.

"WHY THE PEOPLE OF THIS COMMUNITY SHOULD SUPPORT LOCAL INDUSTRY"

By ELMER STEVENS

"The system of small, local business is the just, generous and prosperous system which keeps the way open to all; gives hope to all and conserves the improvement of conditions of all". Thus spoke Abraham Lincoln of the free market indicating that that home industries operated on a paying basis form the very greatness of America. If they don't thrive, the community suffers—suffers in loss of taxes and support for local community enterprises. A community operated by home industries is a source of pride and prosperity; money kept at home means better homes, schools, libraries ,parks and a lower tax burden for the individuals in the communty. What benefits one, benefits all.

Yet, there are hundreds of communities ruined by the shortsightedness of their inhabitants who take wealth out of the community in buying out of town. Their schools and churches are running down; their streets need repair, many stores are closed, others barely make a living simply because their residents though they "were saving by buying out of town."

Buying from large centers—out of town large concerns—is adding fuel to America's No. 1 economic problem—centralization of power in the hands of a few—Unless a return to decentralization is realized American private enterprise and democracy is doomed!

Local, small business is going out too fast. During the past year 107 big companies absorbed 380 smaller competitors in the food business alone. One big dairy concern has nearly 500 separate enterprises and sits astride as much as 60 per cent of the dairy business in several of our large centers.

This whole tendency is dangerous and buying out of town is dangerous. It's best to string along with your local business men—your neighbor—your fellow citizen—before it's too late!

The wedding party included Mr. and Mrs. Ward Gates, Mrs. Ray Kimball, grandmother of the bride, the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Gabe Fry.

FEROCIOUS GRAY SQUIRREL'S RABID CAREER VIOLENTLY ENDED

NEVADA CITY: Max Solaro, chief of police, yesterday killed the belligerent gray squirrel which has been biting people and dogs.

The pretty little animal was looking Max over as a possible breakfast nut when the chief laid him low with his police truncheon. The squirrel will be sent to the University of California laboratory in Berkeley.

Since the gray squirrel attracted attention Thursday by chasing a dog, running up its haunches and biting it, followed by biting the hand of a man who tried to brush him off his pant leg, and later on the finger of a woman who tried to pet, the ferocious squirrel is reported to have bitten two more persons.

UNWELCOME GUEST IN SUMNER PARLOR

GRASS VALLEY: The home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Summers, 340 Pleasant Street, Thursday morning stopped a runaway oil truck belonging to the Mountain Oil Company. The truck radiator and bumper entered the parlor.

The truck placed at the north end of Temby Street to deliver oil to a private residence, according to the driver, John T. Traumer and his assistant, Wallace Reed, was properly blocked to prevent it moving even if the brakes gave way. Even so, the truck broke away, crashed through a picket fence after it crossed Pleasant Street and was stopped by the Sumner residence. No one was home at the time.

Two years ago, June 2nd, 1945, the Sumner home was partially destroyed when a Dutch airplane raked the roof of the house and crashed in a grove of trees a hundred yards to the west, killing five young Dutch pilots, who were about to return to the East Indies.

LAWYERS WANT PAY FOR PUBLIC DEFENDING

NEVADA CITY: The Nevada County Bar Association meeting at dinner in Deer Creek adopted a resolution requesting the board of supervisors to pass an ordinance, providing for compensation of attorneys when appointed by the court to defend impecunious offenders.

During the discussion it was pointed out that since the war the number of cases to which attorneys must devote their time has practically doubled. The recent Hardy trials were cited as examples of the free time, which attorneys have accorded accused in defending them. The supervisors were asked to set a maximum of $50 per day as a fee for such cases.

William J. Cassetari was chosen president for 1948, John LaRue, vice president, and Robert C. Schiffner, secretary.

A committee was appointed to make recommendations regarding the courtroom, which it is felt is entirely unsuited to trying cases before a jury. The committee consists of John LaRue, Crofford W. Bridges, and William J. Cassettari.

MINER HURT IN THE NEW BRUNSWICK

GRASS VALLEY: Dominic Cilione, miner, was brought up from the 1600 foot level of the New Brunswick Mine yesterday morning, suffering from a fractured shoulder, facial cuts and a cracked jaw, as a result of being caught between the tunnel wall and a motor.

MINERS CAUGHT IN GAS CLOUD RECOVERING

GRASS VALLEY: Two New Brunswick miners returning to a recently blasted pocket on the 3280 foot level of the mine, Saturday noon, were caught in a gas cloud. The men were Mark Young who retained consciousness and Gene Thomas who blacked out and fell 30 feet down the manway.

Young telephoned for help and the men were speedily brought to the surface where they were taken by ambulance to a local hospital. Both are expected to recover shortly. Thomas was bruised and shaken by the fall down the manway incline.

The two miners had blasted a round in the pocket before lunch. They were returning to rig up again when they were caught in the gas cloud which had not yet cleared.

Lumberman Breaks Leg In Two Places

CAMPTONVILLE: Dan C. Jaynes had the misfortune of breaking his leg in two places by a fall in logging operations on the Jaynes homestead south of this place, and is now confined in a Grass Valley hospital. The Jaynes Brothers, consisting of Dan, John and Warren recently installed a saw mill on their property and had just started to cut lumber.

LUMBER DEMAND and SUPPLY

The supply of lumber was not sufficient to meet the high demand during the third quarter of 1947, the Lumber Survey Committee advised the Secretary of Commerce in its 66th Quarterly Report. The month-by-month increase in building upset the near-balance existing in the market at the end of the second quarter.

Lumber prices, which had shown signs of stabilization in May and June, especially in the common grades, increased month by month during the summer, and by September 30 reached a record high. Premium prices are frequently offered for quick delivery.

Building activity has shown a steady increase since the beginning of the year. September, with 92,000 new homes started, broke all previous records for a single month and preliminary estimates indicate that an equal number of new homes were started in October.

Freight car shortages have seriously hampered the shipment of lumber during the summer and fall months, especially in the West Coast region. Coastwise and intercoastal steamer space available for lumber is far from adequate.

Just Wonderin'

I Wonder why the clever man
We call our favorite newscaster
Regales us almost every day
With murder, fire and dire disaster;
Sweet bells are jangled out of tune,
Mankind is groping through the fog,
And so amid earth's raucous sounds
The daily news is, "man bites dog."

I Wonder if we often place undue blame upon those who bring us the daily news. After the close of the war, we hoped to read and hear the sounds of peace; the soft swish of an olive branch and the gentle cooing of a dove. Such things were not to be. This is an open season for our kind and the detailed accounts of world tribulations do not make good reading or good listening.

There was a time which many of us remember when war's alarms seemed far away; there might be a revolution in South America or a squabble of some sort in lands across the sea; but the sounds and effects of battle did not touch our quiet shores, neither were they a part of our daily conversations; now, murder, fire and sudden death prevail on every hand. A ship goes down at sea, a plane crashes and there is great loss of life in both incidents, the crimson tide of war is rising still and our reporters and radio newscasters are burdened with the task of keeping all records straight and telling an avid public of each and every new disaster.

Let's try to understand and appreciate the work of the busy men and women who bring us the news. They are as tired of bad news as we are and perhaps if we evidenced more interest in the brighter side of life, they would mingle the dark with the light; but we are a sensation loving people and if there is anything of the terrible and macabre anywhere or at any time, we want to know all about it.

The gentle soul who said, "the world is to much with us," had neither seen nor heard anything. There were no radios in his time, no lightning means of communication; the world was a monstrous place and what happened in some remote part of it, was like an echo, or a dream. Now we are not only in the world, we are in the maelstrum of its confusion and strife and there are no cyclone cellars that offer escape.

The over worked purveyors of news will have heavy tasks this year and we must brace ourselves and prepare to brave the storm as it gathers and breaks upon us. We are in the wrack of the storm, part of it in fact and while we hope for those better world conditions which may come, let us not forget the tasks of making our own decisions and forming our home made political problems. Our duty as world citizens and as citizens of our own U. S. A. will keep us alert for months to come, we'll just have to wake up and take all in our stride.

Uncle Silas says; "this world is like a very small apple; too little to be devided."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Are You "Hobby Happy?"

Funny thing about hobbies... When Ed Carey started making a model of the "Flying Cloud," it was only to rest his eyes from reading. But now he spends every spare moment ship modelling!

Some wives might have resented a husband suddenly shutting himself in the attic every night. But not Ed's Prudence. When she found him working late, she brought him up some beer and crackers... showed a real interest in his hobby ... until finally Ed had her helping with the rigging.

Wasn't long before they were working side by side on Ed's bench, sharing a common interest. Instead of keeping them apart, Ed's hobby brought them more together.

From where I sit, a husband's hobby can often be a wife's as well. In fact, I've got the missus interested in tying trout flies—and, along with that mellow glass of beer, it makes the evenings go by mighty pleasantly.

THE - Diary of a 49'er

FROM THE BOOK EDITED BY C. L. CANFIELD

JULY 27, 1851.—Our claim is pretty nearly played out. There may be a month's more work, but the bed-rock raises up on each side of the flat along the hill and there is no gravel in that direction. Pard thinks we had better work together for a couple of weeks and then he will go down on the river to get things ready, leaving me to clean up. If we take out three thousand dollars more I will have made altogether twelve thousand dollars, counting what I have sent home and invested with Pard at the Bay. He got a letter from John Perry, his agent who is looking after the lots, and he tells him he can double his money if he wants to sell, but Pard says: "Let's hold on and make a big stake or nothing." One night last week after supper, we were sitting out under the old tree, when he spoke up suddenly and said: "Alf, there is no reason why I should not tell you part of my story and my real name. I am not ashamed of it and there is no reason why I should conceal it." Then he went on to say that his true name was . . . . . and that he was born at Syracuse, went through college, studied law and practiced in his own town until he came here. He did not build up much of a business and while he was as poor as Job's off ox he married a girl who had considerable money in her own right. He loved her dearly, but she was extravagant, fond of society and luxury, which he could not afford from his own income, and she would not settle down until he could make his way. Then they began quarreling and she nagged him about her money and her family until he could not stand it any longer and, the gold fever breaking out, he left for California. He made up his mind never to go back until he had as much money as his wife, and, if he failed, why then he would disappear for good. She thought he was in San Francisco, wrote to him there and the letters were forwarded by a friend to Nevada. For some time past she has been coaxing him to return or let her come here, and he had promised to go to the States next spring. That is all there was to the story. He did not say much about what she was writing, but I knew from the change in him that things were different from what they were when I first met him, and he was pretty happy over it. Of course, he would have to keep the name of Anderson until he left Nevada, as he could not explain the situation to anyone but me. I can see now why he used to be so sarcastic about the troubles women could make. I hope it will come out all right.

(Note.—While Jackson's frank revelations concerning himself, his experiences, loves and adventures can with safety be given to the world, as he and his kin have vanished into the unknown, the name that he reveals as the rightful one of his partner is another matter. It is that of one who stood among the foremost at the San Francisco Bar and high in the councils of the state; famous and successful as a pleader in many of the noted cases before the courts, an orator of persuasive eloquence and, withal, a man of fortune. He has been dead many years, but his immediate descendants are living in California, enjoying the fruits of his wealth and the benefits of his honorable name. While there is nothing disgraceful in the episode, still it is a chapter in his domestic affairs in which the hero must remain unidentified.)

CLEAN OUT THE SLUDGE

Even though cars are equipped with oil filtering devices, the necessity or occasionally dropping the oil pan and removing the emulsified substance that collects at the bottom has not entirely passed, according to the Service Deparment of National Automobile Club. This item of car care should be attended to at least once yearly. The screen and pan should be cleaned out, thoroughly dried, and then replaced.

GENERAL ELECTRIC cuts prices in
bid to stop inflation
$50,000,000 AT RETAIL LEVELS
Some of the products on which prices are reduced January 1, 1948
Profits still too low

WHY GENERAL ELECTRIC PUT LOWERED PRICES AHEAD OF OTHER THINGS

General Electric lowered prices because we wanted to do our part to stop the present spiral of inflation.

General Electric lowered prices on electrical appliances in greatest demand—because that is where lowered prices on General Electric products will do the most good and have the greatest effect.

General Electric lowered prices regardless of the fact that G-E profits are not high—are not at present levels high enough.

We did this because we know that in the long run General Electric can prosper only as the people of this country prosper. We believe that producing more goods for more people at less cost is the soundest way of running a business. And we feel that inflation in this country has reached a dangerous level—for the wage earner, for the man with savings, and for industry alike.

Do you know what inflation can do to you?

As money buys less and less, your savings lose their buying power. Life insurance policies dwindle in value. Money saved to take your wife to the hospital won't pay the bill when the time comes. Pay checks buy less and less. Retirement money won't pay for retirement.

This applies to the man who brings home a weekly pay check, to the man with savings in the bank or a life insurance policy, and to companies that have to build new plants and buy new machines to fill future needs and provide future jobs.

Inflation is a sinister thing. It steals up on a country and its economy in a gradually accelerating two-step of prices and wages—each trying to get one step ahead of the other—and there is no red line to show when the danger point has been reached.

Inflation is like a fire. Once it gets well under way, it can never be checked until everything is destroyed.

Self-restraint by industries and individuals the best check

You as an individual can do most by buying less and saving more—thus avoiding bidding up the prices for scarce goods. Business and industry can do much by lowering prices whenever and wherever possible—voluntarily.

General Electric put lowered prices ahead of other things because we believe it is a step towards licking inflation.

We Must Destroy Inflation or It Will Destroy Us
